Organisation name: Home Office

Team/Department: Crime and Policing Analysis, Home Office Science

Address: 2 Marsham Street, London. SW1P 4DF

Provisional title for project:

Enhancing our understanding of violence against children using secondary data analysis.

Abstracts:

Whilst the evidence base on violence has increased considerably over the last few years, our understanding of the characteristics of child victims of violent crime is less well established. This work proposes analysis of large scale surveys and data from individual police forces to understand demographics of victims and offenders, and to unpick differences between adult and child victims of violence.

Data sources: The Home Office Data Hub contains record level crime and victim data from police forces. It is an extremely rich data source, and further analysis is required in order to maximise its benefits.

Some large scale surveys contain underutilised data on violence— eg Crime Survey for England and Wales, Psychiatric Morbidity Survey, Millennium Cohort Study, and others. And cohort studies, such as the E-risk twin, Edinburgh Youth, and Cambridge Delinquency Studies, are rich sources of data on the behaviour of young people.

Key words:

Child victims of violent crime; child safeguarding; police administrative data; Crime Survey for England and Wales; crime trends.

Essential and desirable skills:

- Essential skills: good quantitative skills (eg SPSS, STATA, R) gained from analysis of both administrative and survey data. Strong problem solving skills. Good communication skills (written and oral).
- Desirable skills: experience in presenting complex data visually.
