Policy responses to precarious work

Damian Grimshaw
Deputy Director WEI, University of Manchester IGAU Conference, December 2017

Joint work with Mat Johnson, Arjan Keizer & Jill Rubery

The problem:

Precarious work thrives in an employment system that is exclusive instead of inclusive

The problem:

Precarious work thrives in an employment system that is exclusive instead of inclusive

i) Part-time and variable hours work

More exclusive

No minimum hours

No scheduling notice

No overtime premium

Women's overrepresentation / male breadwinner

Limited/high cost childcare

Earnings or hours threshold

Employment rights?

Gender regime?

Social protection?

More inclusive

Minimum hours

Schedule change notice

Overtime premium

Gender balance/ dual earner households

Affordable childcare

No (or low) earnings threshold

Uprated contributions

Examples of inclusive legal responses:

No perfect model but lots of good ideas:

Denmark

- low threshold access to social protection (e.g. 34 weeks of work over 3 years to access unemployment benefits) and high replacement rate
- citizenship rights to pension

France

- minimum 24 hours per week (although exceptions –e.g. students, subsidised jobs)
- minimum 10% overtime premium

Germany

- regulates minimum shifts and working hours for on-call workers (3 hours per shift, 10 hours per week)
- four days notice to workers to change schedule

Spain

limits additional variable hours to 10 per week (or 30% of usual hours)

WORK & EQUALITIES

Examples of collectively bargained responses:

Denmark

 Sectoral collective agreements usually set minimum weekly hours of 20-28 hours (no legislation)

France

 Social partners are obliged to negotiate the actual minimum hours, the number/duration of interruption periods, and notice period for schedule changes

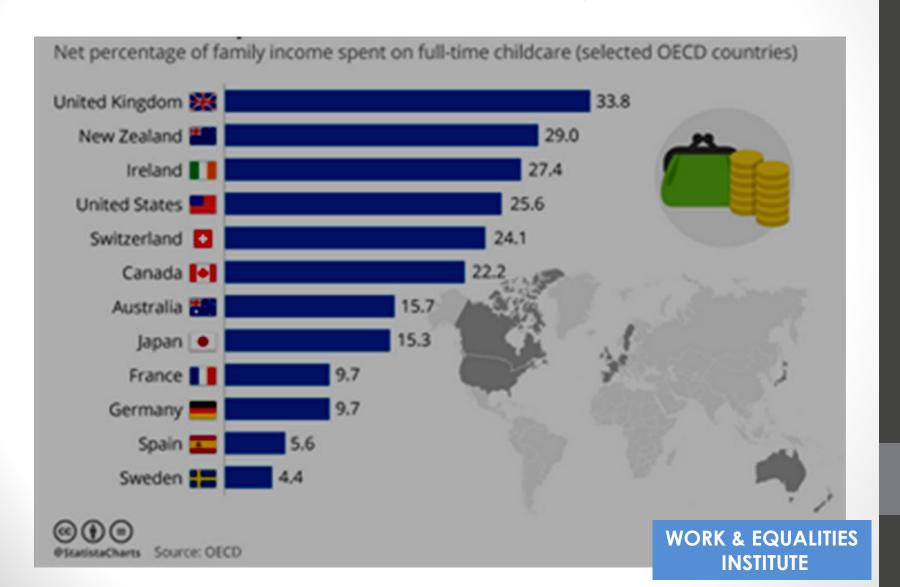

Germany

 Several collective agreements fix minimum hours and shift periods (no legislation)

UK

 Unison's 'Ethical Care Charter' –eliminate zero hours contracts, pay for travel time, pay a living wage and provide sickness protection (but limited take up so far)

UK's unaffordable childcare reinforces a male breadwinner approach and restricts job choice

ii) Subcontracted (outsourced) work

More exclusive

Contract price prioritised

Short duration for the protection of terms & conditions post transfer

Transfer to non-unionised company

Feminised jobs targeted for outsourcing

Rights reduced due to interrupted tenure

Risk to pension benefits

Employment rights?

Gender regime?

Social protection?

More inclusive

Service quality prioritised

Long duration protect ion of conditions post transfer

Equality of conditions along supply chain

Gender impact assessment

Continuity of protections with change in employer

Legal responses?

EU Acquired Rights Directive sets an important minimum standard of employment protection

- protects conditions at point of transfer
- transfer cannot constitute grounds for dismissal
- gives unions information & consultation rights
- 12 month protection of ex-employer's collective agreement

But only fixes a low, minimum set of standards. Plenty of scope to improve conditions and experience of job security

Building on a statutory floor through collective bargaining and enforcement?

Spain

- some sector and company level agreements restrict types of activities exposed to subcontracting
- others compel the contractor to audit subcontractor's social security contributions
- also extend health and safety protections down the supply chain

Germany

 wage clauses common in local government procurement (despite ECJ rulings) plus local authority inspections (and fines) of subcontractors

Denmark

 local government subcontractors must follow sector collective agreement (audited by local authority)

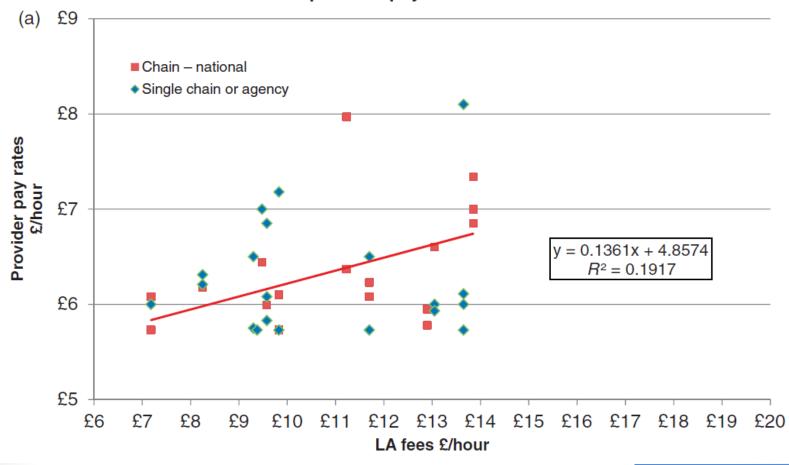

UK

- ongoing positive effect of Two Tier Code (abolished in 2010) in some areas of NHS subcontracting
- but evidence of avoidance of TUPE in local government outsourcing

E.g. UK local government subcontracted care work

Raising fees improves pay but provider profits and the undervaluation of care work need to be addressed

LA fees and provider pay rates for home care

Source: Grimshaw, D., Rubery, J. and Ugarte, S. (2015) 'Does better quality contracting improve pay and HR practices? Evidence from for-profit and voluntary sector providers of adult care services in England', Journal of Industrial Relations, 57 (4): 502-525.

iii) Temporary work

More exclusive

Long and rigid tenure requirements

Rigid continuity requirements for maternity and paternity leave

High contributions over short period

Intermittent work penalised

Long tenure requirements

Employment rights?

Gender regime?

Social protection?

More inclusive

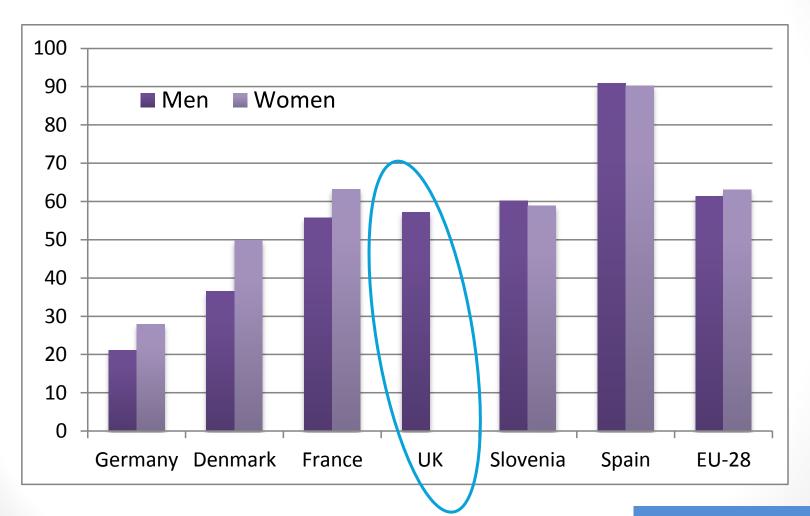

No (or very short) tenure requirements

Flexible criteria for maternity/paternity leave

Few contributions over a long period

No (short) tenure requirements

For most temporary workers in the UK it is 'second choice' work (Eurostat 2015 data)

What legal responses?

UK requires 24 months tenure for employment protection

Germany 6m, Spain special rule of 1m for temps with contracts <6m

European directives provide for equality of treatment of fixed-term and (after 12 weeks) agency workers

- Other countries supplement with collective agreements
- But the UK exploits exemptions (no right to equal pay if agency is employer and pays between assignments)

Some countries offer redundancy compensation:

Spain pays 12 days earnings per year worked to temps

Over-use of temporary workers can be restricted:

France restricts agency contracts to two renewals, max 18 months

Employers can be penalised for high use of temp work:

Higher social security contributions in France

The UK has very tough eligibility criteria for paid maternity leave

	Eligibility conditions
Denmark	-120 hours in preceding 13 weeks (eg. 9 hours pw or 3.4 weeks full-time) (any employer)
France	-150 hours in previous 3 months (eg. 12 hours pw or 4.3 weeks full-time) OR earned above €9000 in previous 6 months (any employer)
Germany	-all employed women
Slovenia	-all employed women
Spain	-360 days employment over working life -exemptions for women aged under 26 years
UK	-Employee, not worker -26 weeks continuous work with same employer up to 15 th week before due date -Earnings above lower earnings threshold (16 hours pw at MW)

More inclusive policy and practice?

- Strengthen worker voice in workplaces
- Minimum hours guarantees (and greater employee control over work schedules)
- Targeted training subsidies for workers in non-standard employment
- Oblige unions and employers to conduct gender equality bargaining
- Tax penalties on employers who over-use insecure contracts
- Extend public sector conditions along supply chain (e.g. 'social value' procurement)
- Extend employment rights and social security protections to include the self employed
- Facilitate access for workers in short hours, intermittent, low paid work to social protection
- Commit more resources to enforce labour standards