

Center for Dementia Research (CEDER)

Linköping University

CEDER - Center for Dementia Research

CEDER is based on a research grant from
Riksbankens Jubileumsfond

CEDER is based on a research grant from
Riksbankens Jubileumsfond

and started during fall 2011

The guiding perspective of CEDER is to start with the remaining abilities of persons with dementia and the ways

The guiding perspective of CEDER is to start with the remaining abilities of persons with dementia and the ways

➤ the persons with AD actually make use of their remaining cognitive and linguistic abilities;

The guiding perspective of CEDER is to start with the remaining abilities of persons with dementia and the ways

- the persons with AD actually make use of their remaining cognitive and linguistic abilities;
- other persons support these abilities in everyday interaction;

The guiding perspective of CEDER is to start with the remaining abilities of persons with dementia and the ways

- the persons with AD actually make use of their remaining cognitive and linguistic abilities;
- other persons support these abilities in everyday interaction;
- that new conceptions of the person with AD can be introduced and used in research, policy contexts and in education.

Research program:

Research program:

- Everyday life with dementia
- Identity, communication and dementia
- Personhood, citizenship and dementia

Research projects:

Research projects:

- Encountering the local welfare state: Citizen with dementia applying for and receiving care

Research projects:

- Encountering the local welfare state: Citizen with dementia applying for and receiving care
- Self-help and support groups

Research projects:

- Encountering the local welfare state: Citizen with dementia applying for and receiving care
- Self-help and support groups
- Relational Selfhood and Relational Autonomy in Dementia Care

Research projects:

- Encountering the local welfare state: Citizen with dementia applying for and receiving care
- Self-help and support groups
- Relational Selfhood and Relational Autonomy in Dementia Care
- Couples: Identity and communication

Research projects:

- Encountering the local welfare state: Citizen with dementia applying for and receiving care
- Self-help and support groups
- Relational Selfhood and Relational Autonomy in Dementia Care
- Couples: Identity and communication
- Co-construction of understanding in interaction involving people with dementia

Research projects:

- Encountering the local welfare state: Citizen with dementia applying for and receiving care
- Self-help and support groups
- Relational Selfhood and Relational Autonomy in Dementia Care
- Couples: Identity and communication
- Co-construction of understanding in interaction involving people with dementia
- Ethnocultural Issues: Identity, Communication and Dementia

Research projects:

- Encountering the local welfare state: Citizen with dementia applying for and receiving care
- Self-help and support groups
- Relational Selfhood and Relational Autonomy in Dementia Care
- Couples: Identity and communication
- Co-construction of understanding in interaction involving people with dementia
- Ethnocultural Issues: Identity, Communication and Dementia
- The individual's experience of space in early phases of dementia: A longitudinal study

Interdisciplinary center - researchers with background in:

- psychology
- linguistics and speech therapy
- anthropology & ethnology
- social work
- nursing
- philosophy & ethics
- architecture

Research methods:

- Participant observation
- Video recordings
- Interviews in natural settings
- Analysis of policy documents
- Conceptual analysis

Dissemination and communication of research

- Conferences;
- Publication in journals;
- Text books; Popular texts;
- Annual/bi-annual international symposia;
- Annual "open day" in cooperation with support centers & university programs;
- Internal seminar/s;
- Teaching on educational programs

<http://www.imh.liu.se/ceder/?l=en>

